JOHN HUNT MORGAN AND THE THE BATTLE OF GALLATIN

The Battle of Gallatin
August 1862

Randy P. Lucas

August 1862 was a busy and dangerous time in Gallatin. Though occupied by Federal forces, Sumner County was being frequently raided by Colonel John Hunt Morgan and his brigade of Confederate cavalry. Colonel Morgan raided through Gallatin on August 12, 1862 capturing Federal garrison commander Colonel Boone in his bed at the Johnny Bell Hotel just before sunrise.

John Hunt Morgan

Informed that the garrison was surrounded, Colonel Boone advised his command to surrender, allowing Morgan's 800 men to capture the Gallatin garrison of 125 men without a shot.

After the capture of Gallatin, Morgan sent some of his men to South Tunnel just north of the city on the Louisville & Nashville railroad line. This detachment captured the guards and wrecked the tunnel to such an extent that it would take the Federals more than ninety days to repair it and reopen the rail supply line. Morgan captured several locomotives and large amounts of supplies and stores. Wanting to further disrupt the railway, he sent men south along the line toward Nashville to destroy the bridges. The people of Gallatin assisted Morgan in his destruction of Federal property and supplied his forces with food, drink and the other things they needed. In turn, Morgan allowed them to share in the fifteen boxcar loads of supplies that he captured. Morgan paroled his Federal prisoners and returned to his base in Hartsville late on the 12th. He left a small detachment to finish the destruction of Federal property at Gallatin.

Two regiments of Federal troops traveled from Nashville to recapture Gallatin attacking Morgan's rearguard killing 6 and wounding 2 of Morgan's men. The Federal commander, Colonel John F. Miller, entered Gallatin on the morning of the 13th. He ordered the search of every home and the business and the arrest of any citizen who was suspected of assisting Morgan.

On August 19, 1862 the new Federal commander in Gallatin Lt. Colonel Horace Heffren of the 50th Indiana Infantry rounded up approximately 130 male citizens of Gallatin who aided or abetted Morgan and prepared to remove them to Nashville for imprisonment. Heffren left with his prisoners in the middle of the night. Morgan learned of these arrests and removals and arrived in Gallatin in the early morning hours of the 20th. He found the town in an uproar with reports that nearly every male resident over the age of twelve was being marched to Nashville. He quickly pursued Heffren and freed most of the prisoners near Saundersville, capturing 163 Federals in the process. He and the liberated citizens returned to Gallatin and Morgan and his men camped at the fairgrounds just west of town.

During the night of the 20th, Morgan received a report that Federal forces were approaching Gallatin from the east along Hartsville Pike. Morgan gathered his men about sunrise and met the Federal forces at the junction of Scottsville and Hartsville Pikes. The Federal forces, about 800 strong vigorously attacked Morgan's men and the battle see-sawed back and forth on the east edge of town, but by 9:30 a.m. the Federals were retreating closely followed by Morgan. During this Battle of Gallatin Federal forces lost 64 killed, 100 wounded and 200 captured. Confederate losses were 5 killed, eighteen wounded and two missing.

The Confederate dead and those who died of their wounds were buried in Confederate Circle in the Gallatin City Cemetery.

STEALING A YANKEE CAPTAIN.

C. L. Daughtry, Company B, Ninth Tennessee Cavalry, Bristow, Ky., writes:

In the fall of 1863, while Gen. E. A. Paine was in command of the Union forces at Gallatin, Tenn., I was there for several weeks as a Confederate soldier. While there a boy friend of mine (a cousin of Capt. Tom Love, who still resides at Gallatin) and I decided to leave Gallatin and join Morgan or Forrest. After arranging our plans we decided to take a Yankee captain with us. I was to see that captain and make arrangements with him. After several meetings he consented to go, and we fixed the time to start at twelve o'clock on a dark night. Gen. Paine's headquarters were in the Dr. Douglass residence on Main Street, and his horses were kept in a stable in the rear of the old hotel near by. At the appointed time we met at the stable, intending that the government should

We had our annual planning meeting in January to set the Camp's 2016 calendar and setting forth our plans for the coming year. First, the Camp voted to authorize up to $250 to repair the second flagpole at Confederate Circle from which we have flown National flags. This Spring we will replace the broken flagpole in a concrete sleeve that extends down underground about 3 feet and above ground about 3 feet.

Our Camp schedule is not firmly settled as we have some details to settle to determine whether we are going to do the Spring and Fall Festivals. If we do, we are going to have to have commitments from you to actively participate. The Annual Reunion is scheduled for April 8-9, 2016 in Knoxville. We are entitled to four delegates plus Past Commander Heathman, so I would like to take four to Reunion. Be thinking if you are interested in being one of our delegates.

This year's Confederate Decoration Day will be on June 4th. I want to do another Camp picnic this year, too. We also want to have a table this year at the Forrest Boyhood Home event scheduled for June 18th. As we get closer we will put out more details.

We are also going to participate in the Cemetery Tour in October as well as the Bethpage Christmas parade. Other parades may also be added as they become relevant.

Our first Quarterly Breakfast will be on March 26th at 9:00 a.m. at Mables on South Water in Gallatin. I'll call and reserve us a big table.

We are also planning, this year to put a new monument similar to the Hunley Monument at Confederate Circle. It will have the battle flag or the SCV logo, Carmack's Pledge to the South and information on those buried in Confederate Circle. We anticipate this monument costing about $2,500 to complete so we will begin fundraising through sales and other sources. I will be working out legal details with the city to finalize a site.

Next month's meeting will be on February 11th and our program will be presented by Donna Hartley Lucas on Famous Confederate Romances. At this meeting we are inviting our wives and sweethearts and we will have a pitch in dinner with the Camp providing pulled pork and we ask each of you to bring a side dish. This should be a good meeting, a good program and great fellowship. Please plan on being there.

furnish our horses. Everything went well until we were ready to leave the stable, when we thought we were discovered so we decided to disband and wait for another opportunity.

Love decided not to make another attempt, but the captain and I met again and agreed upon leaving in daylight, which we did. The captain being on intimate terms with Gen. Paine's staff and orderlies we walked down to his headquarters at ten o'clock one morning and the captain borrowed two horses for us to go to the country for a short while. We both had passes through the picket line, so we started out the Scottsville Pike, nearly east, and after getting outside the pickets, we went around the town till we struck the Red River Pike, which was on the opposite side of the town. We traveled during the day and night, and on the next day were in Cheatham County. We ran across a body of Yankee cavalry which had been sent after us, and barely escaped with the loss of our horses.

After hiding in the woods for five or six days we made our way back to within a few miles of Gallatin. In the meantime Gen. Paine had offered a reward for our capture. While camping out near Gallatin we met a citizen by the name of Simmons who lived near Hunter's Point in Wilson County, who was anxious to get home. As we could not find a boat, we decided to make a raft and cross the Cumberland River—I think we were in Cage's Bend. We succeeded in crossing the river and went home with Mr. Simmons, where we stayed two days. From there we went out near Lavergne, and I went into the town selling some eggs which we had borrowed from a farm house. My object was to get some pistols and cartridges, which I did from a friend of the Yankee captain. Leaving Lavergne we stayed a few days in Maury County near Spring Hill with a friend by the name of McGrady. After several narrow escapes we made our way from there down Duck River to Centerville in Hickman County, where we recruited a squad of independent cavalry. We operated in that section for several months when I was captured, and was at Columbia when Forrest threatened to attack it. I was sent to Camp Chase where I was a year under the name of Charles Douglass. The Yankee captain was George I. King, captain of Company I, One Hundred and Second Illinois Regiment of Infantry. He made a good soldier for the South under the name of George Sinclair.

Donelson Bivouac Officers 1897

At a recent meeting of the Donelson Bivouac at Gallatin, Tenn.. Rev. J. G. Dorris made a strong address in refutation of the charge that the Methodist Church brought on the war. At the same meeting the following list of officers was chosen for the ensuing year: President, John T. Branham, reelected; Vice-Presidents, Sam R. Simpson, A. E. Bell, Thomas S. Ellis; Secretary, George G. Bryson; Chaplain, James G. Martin; Surgeon, H. H. Bate; Serjeant-at-Arms J. T. E. Odom.

LIEUT. COL. RICHARD CHARLTON.

Of all the heroic sons that the gallant State of Mississippi gave to our great cause, Lieut. Col. Richard Charlton was the peer of the best in all that constitutes true and noble manhood. He was born in 1825, near Gallatin, Tenn.. the son of James and Rachel Charlton. He attended the country schools and "Sylvan Academy." His military career began at the age of twenty years, in 1847, when he volunteered at Gallatin, Tenn.. in Company I, of the First regiment of Tennessee volunteers for service in the Mexican war. Capt. W. M. Blackmore commanded the company, and Richard Charlton was fourth sergeant. This regiment was in the battles of Monterey, Cerro Gordo, and in the siege of Vera Cruz. Charlton did his whole duty in that war, and he returned to his home respected by every soldier of that command.

In 1861, at the call of duty, he went into service for sixty days from Raymond, Miss., where he was then living, at the expiration of which time he raised a company known as the "Charlton Rebels," in February, 1862, which formed a part of the Forty-Fifth Mississippi infantry regiment. This regiment was commanded by Col. Harcastle, with Richard Charlton as lieutenant colonel. Harcastle was disabled for duty soon after the regiment was organized, so that it was virtually commanded by Col. Charlton during the war. This regiment participated in the following battles: Perryville, Ky. ; Murfreesboro, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge. Franklin and Nashville, Tenn.; Ringgold Gap. Resaca, New Hope Church, Kennesaw Mountain. Marietta. Atlanta, and Jonesboro. Ga.

This war-worn remnant of a regiment surrendered with the shattered battalions of Joseph E. Johnston, at Greensboro, N. C., on April 26, 1865. During the entire war, from its inception to its end, Lieut. Col. Richard Charlton, of the Forty-Fifth Mississippi, was engaged in active field duties, rendering conspicuous service in battle and on the march, and as a Christian gentleman in camp. He was wounded twice. After the war he returned to his home, and resumed his business. He died at Hot Springs, Ark., about fifteen years after the war, and his body was taken to Raymond, Miss. Peace to his ashes.

Confederate Veteran, 1899

Capt. Fry was one of nature's noblemen: modest, but brave, self-possessed under most trying circumstances, even in the heat of battle. He was polished in manners and thoroughly honest. One of his comrades, Capt. H. writes of his son, John D. Fry, Jr., and daughter, Miss Mamie Fry, who reside at the old home in South Boston, as worthy descendants of their noble father. The latter especially won his reward by her warm-hearted hospitality on a recent visit to her home.

Confederate Veteran, 1899

Capt. John D. Fry

Capt. John D. Fry, Company C, Seventh Tennessee Infantry, who died a few years since at his home in South Boston, Va., was originally first lieutenant of that company and regiment. On the death of Capt. Baber he was promoted to captain without a dissenting vote, and upon reorganization he was again elected without opposition.

He commanded the old Company C under Stonewall with great credit until fearfully wounded, whereby he was disabled from active duty. He was afterwards assigned to duty in the post office department at Richmond, Va. After the war he returned to Gallatin, Tenn., for a while. However, during the war his heart had been captured by a bright and beautiful Virginia girl, and after his marriage he resided in Virginia.

Confederate Monuments in Tennessee 1909

Bolivar, Tenn., has the first monument erected in the State. The pedestal is thirty-five feet high and is surmounted by an urn draped with a flag. The cost of this was $2,700.

Chattanooga, Tenn., has two monuments—one in Confederate Cemetery, which cost $2,500, and the arch and gate to the cemetery, which cost $1,500.

Chickamauga Park has a monument to Carnes's Battery costing $1,000. It was erected by Capt. W. W. Carnes, of Memphis, Tenn., now residing in Tampa, Fla.

Clarksville, Tenn., has two shafts of Barre granite capped by bronze figures and surrounded by a statue representing different branches of the service. The cost of this monument was $7,500.

Dyersburg, Tenn., has a beautiful shaft of white marble surmounted by a figure of a soldier leaning on a gun.

Farmington, Tenn., is the oldest village in the State, and the people were Union sympathizers. At a fight near there a number of Wheeler's Cavalry were killed. Those who were known were buried in the cemetery: the sixteen unknown men were interred in a lot near where they fell. A monument has been erected to these sixteen unknown heroes.

Fayetteville, Tenn., through Zollicoffer-Fulton Chapter, U. D. C. has erected a monument in Confederate Park. It is a soldier at parade rest capping a pedestal of gray granite, and is surrounded by the huge cannon which had won distinction in actual warfare. It was unveiled in September, 1906.

Franklin, Tenn., has a handsome shaft erected by the U. D. C. Chapter.

Gallatin, Tenn., has a tall shaft of white marble upholding a fine figure of a Confederate soldier. It was unveiled in 1904. United States Senator Carmack was the orator of the occasion.

Jackson, Tenn., has a shaft seventy feet high capped by a soldier at parade rest.

The Knoxville (Tenn.) Memorial Association of ladies erected a monument of green Tennessee marble costing $4,500.

Lewishurg, Tenn., through Veterans and the U. D. C has erected a beautiful monument of granite with a bronze soldier at parade rest on the Public Square.

Memphis, Tenn., has a handsome equestrian statue of Nathan Bedford Forrest, which was unveiled by his granddaughter in 1905.

Mt Pleasant (Tenn.) Chapter. U. D. C. has erected a tall shaft with drooping flags upbearing the figure of a soldier standing with folded arms.

Murfreesboro. Tenn., has a monument erected by the U. D. C. Chapter and Palmer Bivouac.

The Nashville, Chattanooga & St Louis Railroad has erected a handsome shaft in honor of Confederate dead. It is near Stone River, on the battlefield of Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Nashville. Tenn., has three monuments, as follows: In Mount Olivet there is a graduated shaft of Vermont granite Forty five feet 6 inches high surmounted by a colossal figure of a soldier. This monument was erected by the women of Tennessee at a cost of $10,500, and stands in the center of a beautiful grassy mound under which the soldiers are buried. The monument to Sam Davis, the young hero of Tennessee, was erected at a cost of $7,000, derived from contributions from all over the United States. The pedestal and approach are of stone, and the standing heroic figure of Sam Davis is of bronze. It is in the grounds of the State Capitol. The monument at Centennial Park to Frank Cheatham Bivouac is of gray granite with the bronze figure of a private soldier and cost about $3,000.

The Paris (Tenn.) Memorial Association erected a monument to Henry County soldiers. It is a granite shaft with the figure of a soldier leaning on his gun Pulaski, Tenn., has a beautiful monument to the hero, Sam Davis, who was hanged in that city. It was erected by the united efforts of the U. C. V. Camp and U. D. C. Chapters.

Sewanee, Tenn., has a shaft with a bronze tablet in honor of Gen. F. A. Shoup.

Trenton, Tenn., has a pretty monument of white bronze.

Soldier of Unknown Identity Buried at Gallatin, Tenn.

—Thomas H. King, Sr., of Gallatin, Tenn., writes : "During the first year of the war a train composed of box cars (the kind then generally used for the transportation of soldiers) arrived at the depot in Gallatin from the South, and upon the top of one was lying a Confederate soldier who had evidently been struck by an overhead bridge or something similar. He was carried to an office near by, where he lived some twenty-four hours; but, with the exception of an occasional moan, no sound escaped his lips. Upon his uniform the buttons had a 'pelican.' leading those who saw him to think he was from Louisiana. He was the first Confederate soldier to be buried at this place, and that was done by Capt. H B. Boude's company with the honors of war. Do any of his comrades remember him? His grave is in Confederate Circle in the cemetery at Gallatin, and the spot is known. This may help some relative to find his grave."

Carmack's Pledge to the South

The South is a land that has known sorrows; it is a land that has broken the ashen crust and moistened it with tears; a land scarred and riven by the plowshare of war and billowed with the graves of her dead; but a land of legend, a land of song, a land of hallowed and heroic memories.

To that land every drop of my blood, every fiber of my being, every pulsation of my heart, is consecrated forever. I was born of her womb; I was nurtured at her breast; and when my last hour shall come, I pray God that I may be pillowed upon her bosom and rocked to sleep within her tender and encircling arms.
